

Nevada Social Studies Standards

Nevada Department of Education

December 2008

Students growing up in the 21st Century face new and exciting challenges unfamiliar to previous generations. These students will need to be open and responsive to new and diverse perspectives with an understanding of how cultural differences impact the interpretation of events at the local, state, national, and international levels. The Social Studies Standards provide Nevada's students with the opportunities to develop skills including the use of sound reasoning, i.e., frame, analyze and solve problems and to make complex choices both inside and outside the classroom. In addition, students will need to learn how to articulate their thoughts and ideas effectively through multimedia communication for a variety of audiences.

Being literate in social studies is essential if students are to leave school with the ability to participate responsibly in local, national, and international affairs as global citizens and pursue a high standard of living. Through the study of history, geography, economics, and civics, our students will develop an appreciation for the contributions made by all people. The purpose of the Nevada Social Studies Standards is to articulate a foundation of skills and content knowledge necessary for Nevada's students to be successful in our increasingly diverse society. The standards are not meant to be considered comprehensive curriculum but are intended to provide guidance to school districts in the development of an appropriate, comprehensive social studies curriculum.

History

Knowledge of one's past and a sense of one's place is fundamental to the development of responsible citizenship. The lens of history allows students to investigate events, issues, and personalities from multiple perspectives by interpreting and evaluating a variety of sources. Given these experiences, we empower our students to make better choices. In addition, today's global society requires students to understand not only the significance of the past, but how history connects to their community, state, nation, and world.

Geography

Geography is the study of people, places, and environments. Geographers describe the changing patterns of places in words, maps, and graphics; explain how these patterns came to be, and unravel their meanings. Geography enables students to find answers to questions about the familiar world around them and about the places they have yet to visit. Geography helps students navigate, appreciate, and ultimately understand the interdependent world in which we live.

Economics

Understanding economics helps people evaluate personal choices, make wise business decisions, and assess public policy issues. In addition, economics helps students understand how the political and economic system affects them. Economic education enhances logical reasoning and analytical skills benefiting individual students and contributing to Nevada's efforts to diversify its economy.

Civics

Democracy requires active participation. The framers of the U.S. Constitution envisioned a government strong enough to rule the nation with power derived from the people. To ensure the continuation of our complex and dynamic system of government, our increasingly diverse society must rely on the knowledge and skills of our citizens and elected public officials. Students study our political system including the legislative, judicial, and executive branches of governments at the local, state, tribal, and national levels, as well as the rights and responsibilities of a citizen.

21st Century Skills: 21st Century learners, termed the "Millennial Learner", are active learners who understand their own strengths and needs and collaborate in learning experiences that prepare them for the reality of our national and global community. Learning experiences infuse the traditional basics such as literacy in the core subjects (English, World Languages, the Arts, Mathematics, Science and the Social Studies) with the new basics of global awareness, financial, economic and business literacy, civic literacy, and information and technology literacy. Every student in America needs 21st Century knowledge and skills to succeed as effective citizens, workers and leaders in the 21st Century.

21st Century learning builds upon and expands beyond the firm foundation of the traditional content areas. Schools which provide a rigorous and relevant inter- or multidisciplinary context add value to their students' educational experience and prepare them for our constantly changing world. By giving greater prominence to emerging 21st Century Content (Global Awareness: Financial, Economic, and Business Literacy; Civic Literacy; and Health and Wellness Awareness), Use of 21st Century Technology Tools (ICT or Information and Communication Technology), 21st Century Assessments, and 21st Century Learning Skills (Information and Communication Skills, Thinking and Reasoning Skills, and Personal and Workplace Productivity Skills), schools begin to more effectively prepare students to engage successfully in the current millennium. 21st Century students will utilize these skills to work effectively with diverse groups, see others' perspectives, while learning how to compromise in order to advance the goals of a democratic society.

Promoting student achievement is key to our continued economic and civic success. Nevada, through its State Improvement Plan and recent legislative acts, supports the realignment of systemic efforts incorporating 21st Century Learning.

The Nevada State Social Studies Standards Document

- The Nevada Social Studies Standards Revision Committee referenced the national standards of the following organizations in the revision of this document: National Council for the Social Studies, National Council for Geographic Education, National Council on Economic Education, National Center for History in the Schools, and The Center for Civic Education's National Standards for Civics and Government.
- The newly revised Nevada Social Studies standards document includes complete standards and benchmarks for grades K – 5 in order to provide Nevada's elementary teachers with a framework for social studies instruction.
- In addition, standards and benchmarks have been banded for grades 6 – 8 and grades 9 – 12 to allow districts the flexibility to align the standards and benchmarks to their courses of study and/or curriculum.
- Within each standard, themes are identified and follow a horizontal path through the K-12 continuum. The concepts and content of the benchmarks develop across grade levels, creating a spiral curriculum.
- The history standards have been organized thematically to allow the teacher greater flexibility to meet the needs of their students and for designing lessons that capitalize on their area(s) of expertise. However, chronological topics have also been included within the themes to provide teachers with a frame of reference for benchmarks in each history standard.
- Benchmarks within this document are minimum student expectations, and are not meant to be considered comprehensive curriculum. The state standards document is intended to provide guidance to school districts in the development of an appropriate, comprehensive social studies curriculum.
- The study of social studies includes a variety of skills which are essential to the understanding of historical, geographic, economic, and civic content. Social studies skills are the foundation and building blocks for students to gain an understanding to become an engaged and informed citizen of the 21st Century. These skills which reflect both 21st Century and social studies skills should be taught as an integrated part of classroom content. Nevada's students must develop skills enabling them to be content literate, gain literacy in media, technology, and information, think critically through historical analysis and interpretation, and become responsible, informed citizens through civic engagement and understanding.
- The intent of the scope and sequence is to provide school districts and teachers with a recommended framework that promotes the teaching of a well balanced social studies curriculum. The scope and sequence is recommended for Nevada's school districts as they plan their social studies curriculum that will allow teachers to provide students with an in-depth analysis of selected ideas, events, personalities, and institutions.

The Nevada Social Studies Standards have been revised based on the depth of knowledge and breadth of experiences contributed by the members of the standards writing team, including K-16 educators (teachers and administrators) and community members from around the state.

	Kindergarten Living, Learning, Working Together	1st Grade Our Neighborhood and Community	2nd Grade Neighborhood and Communities Around the World	3rd Grade People Making a Difference	4th Grade Nevada: Past & Present	5th Grade The United States: Creating a New Nation
	Students learn about values, ideas, customs, and traditions through folk tales, legends, music, and oral histories. These stories of ordinary and extraordinary people will help describe the range and continuity of the human experience. Emphasis is placed on helping students become aware of the purpose of rules and laws, that choices can be related to the scarcity of resources, and helping students describe their location at school and at home.	Students continue to generalize and develop concepts and skills as they learn about their neighborhood and community. Students learn about their roles as members of a family and community and begin to recognize symbols, icons, and songs that reflect a common heritage. Students build their awareness of government and the role it plays in their daily lives. They explore the economic concept of choice and its consequences. Students also begin to locate places on maps and learn how maps serve as representations of physical and human features.	Students begin building a global perspective by looking at communities in their immediate area, and around the country and world. Students study a variety of neighborhoods and the various roles of individuals and families to determine what makes the United States unique. Additionally, students explore different patriotic traditions around the world. Students are introduced to the economic concepts of consumption and production, the uses of money, and the purpose of financial institutions. Students use geographic skills to determine how different communities are influenced by geographic and environmental factors.	Students study people who have leadership qualities and who contribute to making change in their community and the world. Students learn about the diversity of the world's peoples and cultures and how diversity is reflected. Students discuss how entrepreneurs make a difference and learn the economic concepts of income, savings, and interest. Additionally, students study the relationships between people and geography; and how geography is applied to real life situations.	Students continue to build upon their understanding of families, schools, and communities, with an emphasis on Nevada. Students learn the story of Nevada and discuss the motivations for coming to and settling here. Additionally, students study the crucial relationship between the pioneers and the indigenous peoples of the area. Students investigate the past and present political traditions of state and local governments. Students identify entrepreneurial activities of Nevadans and discuss their impact on the growth of the state. Students study the geographic relationship between humans and the physical environment in Nevada.	Students study the development of the nation through Westward Expansion. The focus of study begins with the native inhabitants of the Americas, through the building and expansion of our nation. Students examine the impact of Constitutional issues on American society by studying the ideas, documents, and events that were critical to the building of our nation and the foundations of American democracy. Students explain how different regions of the United States offer specific resources and income opportunities for people. Students study the diversity of the geographic regions of the United States using a variety of geographic tools and resources.

6th Grade - 8th Grade Interdependence & Perspectives: Nevada, U.S. and the World	9th Grade - 12th Grade Continuity & Change
At this level of the social studies curriculum, the students investigate social studies from three perspectives: Nevada, the United States, and the World. Students learn about the foundations, structures, and processes of political systems and institutions. They understand why people are economically interdependent and continue to develop the skills and perspective necessary to study the relationships between the human and physical world using geographic technologies. Nevada Students will explore the growth of Nevada from statehood to present day. Students will examine the processes of government, regions of the state, and analyze the influence of the availability of natural and human resources on the development of Nevada. United States After short review of colonial America, the curriculum emphasis is on the events leading up to the American Revolution through World War II. Through a thematic approach, students identify the relationships among historical eras in the building of a new nation. They explore and evaluate the challenges facing the new nation and make connections between the rise of industrialization and contemporary social and economic conditions. World History Students investigate the development of ancient civilizations and regions through the Age of Exploration. They compare and contrast the major religions of the world, characteristics necessary for the development of sustainable civilizations, the role governments and ideologies play in societies, and the development of regional cultures. Geography Students continue to investigate the world using knowledge and skills learned in previous grades. The students have learned about their home, neighborhood, community, county, and state. Now they will take this knowledge to a larger scale to explore the state, nation, countries, and continents of the world. The students will spend time learning more about cultures, history, regions, and the geographic features of the world.	At this advanced level of social studies, students learn about significant themes that represent continuity and change. U.S. History Following a brief review of the Civil War and significant historical events leading up to the era of Reconstruction, students study the major turning points in U.S. History with an emphasis on the Modern World (1900 to the present day). Students evaluate and analyze how new events continue to shape our nation and society today. World History Students look at societal development from the Renaissance to the present with an emphasis on emerging ideologies, expansion of empires, growth of nations, and an increase of global interdependence. In addition, they examine different cultural perspectives and evaluate how events around the world affect people and regions. Students develop an understanding of current world issues and relate them to their historical, geographical, political, economical, and cultural contexts. World Geography Students study people, places and environments from a physical and cultural perspective. Students gain an appreciation and understanding of the interdependent world in which they live. They analyze and evaluate the connection between their local and global communities. At this level, there is an emphasis on the practical and responsible application of geography to life situations. Government (Civics) Students engage in a course of study focused on political foundations, structures, processes, and institutions. Students learn, as informed and involved citizens, to apply the knowledge and concepts to real world issues. Students also evaluate the impact of government policies on our society. Economics Students develop skills that enable them to function as informed and economically literate citizens in our society and around the world. Students explain how the federal reserve and Congress influence monetary and fiscal policy. Additionally, they explore the implications of global commerce.

	Kindergarten Living, Learning, Working Together	1st Grade Our Neighborhood and Community	2nd Grade Neighborhood and Communities Around the World	3rd Grade People Making a Difference	4th Grade Nevada: Past & Present	5th Grade The United States: Creating a New Nation
	Students learn about values, ideas, customs, and traditions through folk tales, legends, music, and oral histories. These stories of ordinary and extraordinary people will help describe the range and continuity of the human experience. Emphasis is placed on helping students become aware of the purpose of rules and laws, that choices can be related to the scarcity of resources, and helping students describe their location at school and at home.	Students continue to generalize and develop concepts and skills as they learn about their neighborhood and community. Students learn about their roles as members of a family and community and begin to recognize symbols, icons, and songs that reflect a common heritage. Students build their awareness of government and the role it plays in their daily lives. They explore the economic concept of choice and its consequences. Students also begin to locate places on maps and learn how maps serve as representations of physical and human features.	Students begin building a global perspective by looking at communities in their immediate area, and around the country and world. Students study a variety of neighborhoods and the various roles of individuals and families to determine what makes the United States unique. Additionally, students explore different patriotic traditions around the world. Students are introduced to the economic concepts of consumption and production, the uses of money, and the purpose of financial institutions. Students use geographic skills to determine how different communities are influenced by geographic and environmental factors.	Students study people who have leadership qualities and who contribute to making change in their community and the world. Students learn about the diversity of the world's peoples and cultures and how diversity is reflected. Students discuss how entrepreneurs make a difference and learn the economic concepts of income, savings, and interest. Additionally, students study the relationships between people and geography; and how geography is applied to real life situations.	Students continue to build upon their understanding of families, schools, and communities, with an emphasis on Nevada. Students learn the story of Nevada and discuss the motivations for coming to and settling here. Additionally, students study the crucial relationship between the pioneers and the indigenous peoples of the area. Students investigate the past and present political traditions of state and local governments. Students identify entrepreneurial activities of Nevadans and discuss their impact on the growth of the state. Students study the geographic relationship between humans and the physical environment in Nevada.	Students study the development of the nation through Westward Expansion. The focus of study begins with the native inhabitants of the Americas, through the building and expansion of our nation. Students examine the impact of Constitutional issues on American society by studying the ideas, documents, and events that were critical to the building of our nation and the foundations of American democracy. Students explain how different regions of the United States offer specific resources and income opportunities for people. Students study the diversity of the geographic regions of the United States using a variety of geographic tools and resources.

At this level of the social studies curriculum, the students investigate social studies from three perspectives: Nevada, the United States, and the World. Students learn about the foundations, structures, and processes of political systems and institutions. They understand why people are economically interdependent and continue to develop the skills and perspective necessary to study the relationships between the human and physical world using geographic technologies. Nevada Students will explore the growth of Nevada from statehood to present day. Students will examine the processes of government, regions of the state, and analyze the influence of the availability of natural and human resources on the development of Nevada. United States After short review of colonial America, the curriculum emphasis is on the events leading up to the American Revolution through World War II. Through a thematic approach, students identify the relationships among historical eras in the building of a new nation. They explore and evaluate the challenges facing the new nation and make connections between the rise of industrialization and contemporary social and economic conditions. World History Students investigate the development of ancient civilizations and regions through the Age of Exploration. They compare and contrast the major religions of the world, characteristics necessary for the development of sustainable civilizations, the role governments and ideologies play in societies, and the development of regional cultures. Geography Students continue to investigate the world using knowledge and skills learned in previous grades. The students have learned about their home, neighborhood, community, county, and state. Now they will take this knowledge to a larger scale to explore the state, nation, countries, and continents of the world. The students will spend time learning more about cultures, history, regions, and the geographic features of the world.	At this advanced level of social studies, students learn about significant themes that represent continuity and change. U.S. History Following a brief review of the Civil War and significant historical events leading up to the era of Reconstruction, students study the major turning points in U.S. History with an emphasis on the Modern World (1900 to the present day). Students evaluate and analyze how new events continue to shape our nation and society today. World History Students look at societal development from the Renaissance to the present with an emphasis on emerging ideologies, expansion of empires, growth of nations, and an increase of global interdependence. In addition, they examine different cultural perspectives and evaluate how events around the world affect people and regions. Students develop an understanding of current world issues and relate them to their historical, geographical, political, economical, and cultural contexts. World Geography Students study people, places and environments from a physical and cultural perspective. Students gain an appreciation and understanding of the interdependent world in which they live. They analyze and evaluate the connection between their local and global communities. At this level, there is an emphasis on the practical and responsible application of geography to life situations. Government (Civics) Students engage in a course of study focused on political foundations, structures, processes, and institutions. Students learn, as informed and involved citizens, to apply the knowledge and concepts to real world issues. Students also evaluate the impact of government policies on our society. Economics Students develop skills that enable them to function as informed and economically literate citizens in our society and around the world. Students explain how the federal reserve and Congress influence monetary and fiscal policy. Additionally, they explore the implications of global commerce.
